

TRADITIONAL ARCHITECTURE AND LANDSCAPE IN RURAL AREAS OF CANARY ISLANDS BY RINCONES DEL ATLÁNTICO

In December 2015 Rincones del Atlántico published 3rd volume of the work “Architecture and Landscape. Traditional architecture in rural areas of the Canary Islands.”

This monographic work is composed of three volumes. The third and final volume, which consists of 554 pages and more than 3000 photos, is dedicated to the Eastern Canary Islands (Gran Canaria, Fuerteventura and Lanzarote).

Since 2008 Rincones del Atlántico has been concentrating on the production of this multidisciplinary work of great impact and high quality. Like a comprehensive catalogue, beautifully illustrated, the book valorizes the traditional architecture present in all the islands where the rural landscape and vegetation play a fundamental role. This work represents an essential point of reference on the popular architecture of the Canary Islands and its natural, historical and cultural heritage.

The first volume, published in 2008, presents the traditional housing and its immediate surroundings, viewed from the perspective of different specialties (architecture, history, geography, ethnography, rehabilitation, botany, art, literature) written by some of the best professionals in the Canary Islands in each of these areas. The second volume, published in 2014, includes information on Western Canary Islands (El Hierro, La Gomera, La Palma and Tenerife).

Since 2003, Rincones del Atlántico has been continuing its important work for the dissemination of knowledge, enhancement and protection of the Canary Islands’ landscape and natural and cultural heritage, through a book-magazine publication, also available in digital format. All issues are available on the Periodicals section of the website which also has of a news blog. The aim of the journal is to disseminate knowledge, valorization and protection of the landscape and heritage, especially of rural areas, from a cultural, humanistic, ethical and constructive perspective, and offers alternatives for an efficient, eco-friendly and sustainable development.

With all these activities and results Rincones del Atlántico represents an exemplary initiative to promote development processes based on the optimization of natural, human, material, historical and cultural resources of the territory and the application of the latest trends for a sustainable world.
