Launched in 2013 in Guayaquil \(Ecuador\), the Latinoamérica Verde initiative each year rewards, gives visibility and creates networks among the best 500 social and environmental projects in Ibero-America. The Awards contribute to boosting the regional sustainable development by exhibiting initiatives in eight categories aligned with the United Nations Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs). A high-level jury which includes, among others, the United Nations Development Program UNDP and UN-Environment, evaluates all the projects received and chooses the best in each category to name the winners. The winning projects, in addition to obtaining an award certificate and participating in the award events, can have access to mentoring, training programs for sustainable enterprises, co-creation of spaces and business promotion events.

The Awards focus on various areas to develop a sustainable world. In particular, in 2022 the Awards have proposed 8 categories and 19 subcategories that are aligned with the Sustainable Development Goals, so that more projects could be included in the competition. The main topics are: Biodiversity, Cities, Communication, Human development, Economy, Energy, Public policies, Waste.
